MEETING'S REVIEW

For the April meeting 33 members turned up for Ken Cothliff's presentation on his recent trip to Canada and Seattle. The meeting was opened by the Chairman who welcomed all present especially as it was also Mothers Day. He reminded members of the importance of bringing membership cards to meetings and signing in as we are 'airside'. There were also further reminders for the Dinner, Murgatroyds and the Amsterdam trip, and a welcome was extended to Howard Griffin, a prospective new member. Alan Sinfield informed members that Jess Myers had qualified as an Air Traffic Control Assistant at Humberside Airport. Our congratulations go to her!

Ken's trip to Canada and Seattle lasted five weeks and he started with the National Museum of Flight at Renton on the edge of Seattle, the largest museum in the world. The collection is scattered around three sites. Images were shown of a Boeing Stearman biplane, a NASA F104 Starfighter used for astronaut training, a GB racer, a Corsair used in the Korean war (this type was once the world's most powerful piston-engined aircraft), a Harrier used in Vietnam and an AeroCar - this strange looking machine was an attempt to convert a car into a plane, and was owned by Dick van Dyke. There was also an SR-71 Blackbird and an original Wright glider. Now reassembled next door is the Red Barn where Boeing originally started production. The exhibits here were of interest to us airliner enthusiasts like myself and included a BA Concorde (G-BOAG), a prototype 737 and 747 ('Jumbo 1'), as well as a 707 which had been used as Air Force One. A 737-800 used for experimental work was there along with the front half of a US Air 737 which was open to the public. At Everett, to the North of Seattle, there is a reserve collection where restoration work is carried out on aircraft before they are displayed at Renton. Ken showed pictures of the prototype Boeing 727 (N7001U) in old United colours, a Boeing 247D in the original United livery and a prototype Jetstar (4-engined biz-jet) all squeezed into one hangar. Boeing's current production plant is next to this restoration area and is within the world's largest building, complete with its own atmosphere! There is a small museum here but, surprisingly, no complete Boeing aircraft - a 737 nose, prototype Quickie and a 747 engine could be seen. Boeing Dreamlifter aircraft (based on the 747-400 freighter) bring in 787 Dreamliner components from around the world for final assembly here. At the time of Ken's visit there were 787s of Cathay Pacific, EVA Air and Royal Air Maroc present, none of which had flown. The production techniques used for this aircraft differ to those used for other models - ready made and painted parts are put together. Also nearby is a collection of aircraft owned by Paul Allen of Microsoft. These include Mustangs and Ken showed an image of three flying in formation. All the aircraft are in one hangar and all are flown. There was also Space Ship One developed by Richard Branson and a Hellcat from WWII. In addition there is a new museum here, the Historic Flight Museum, which houses a small collection, notably a Lockheed 12 which was developed from the Lockheed 10 used by the aviatrix Amelia Earhart.

During the ten minute break Ken appealed for interesting and unusual photos taken at LBA, particularly the visits of the Aer Lingus A330 and Junkers Ju-52, as he is writing a book on the history of Yeadon Aerodrome due for publication in September 2011 to coincide with the airport's 80th anniversary.After the break Ken concluded his visit to the Seattle area with the Port Townsend Aero Museum at Jefferson County Airport. This is a small privately funded museum with many model aircraft present and only a few visitors. It actively involves young people in restoration work and flying them in the historic aircraft that are airworthy.Ken then moved on to Canada and the museum at Calgary. The aircraft here are all contained within one structure, a large tent with no protection against extremely low temperatures. Consequently many of the exhibits here were in poor condition – these included a Lancaster painted in a dull grey scheme (a British couple had started repainting it) and a Northwest DC3. On the other side of Calgary was a small military museum with a Sea Fury and a WVII Churchill tank.The Bomber Command Museum of Canada at Nanton, Alberta, is by a road rather than on an airfield. It is home to Lancaster FM159 which is not airworthy although some parts are operable.

About half an hour to the West of Toronto is the Canadian Warplane Heritage Museum. There was a Catalina here, in flying condition, a Sikorsky S-61 helicopter and a Harvard used for pleasure flights. There was also the only other airworthy Lancaster, FM672, which is a Canadian built example and flies around 100 hours per year sometimes as far south as Texas. In addition there were many aircraft here operated by Purolator, a freight company who use Boeing 727s and DC10s. There were also examples of balloon bombs developed by the Japanese during WWII. These were launched from four sites in Japan and it was intended they would drift across the Pacific to the US and Canada and start forest fires, however this did not happen as they were launched in winter, the wrong time of the year for such fires! The presentation continued with the Waterloo Air Show held in Ontario and featuring the Snowbirds, the world's oldest aerobatic team, who fly with nine aircraft and, like the Red Arrows keep their displays to within airfield boundaries. Also flying were a Canadian Navy Corsair, a Sabre, a Canadian Harvard aerobatic team of four pilots and a B17F, the only airworthy example in the world and which was used in the movie 'Memphis Belle'. Ken also described the daring aerobatic routines of Jelly Belly, including landing his plane on a moving vehicle! The next location was Toronto Museum which was previously Downs Aerodrome of deHavilland Canada, where Beavers and Chipmunks were built. One of the aircraft here was an ornithopter (C-GPTR), a plane with flapping wings which managed to fly for 14 seconds before crashing, a world record! There was also a Viscount simulator, a C47 Dakota and an East German Mig-21. The final location was Trenton where there are several memorials and also a Canadian Halifax.

The meeting closed at 1650 with the usual presentation of wine but Ken kindly donated the bottle as a raffle prize at the Annual Dinner to be held on the following Friday.

The end of March heralds the beginning of British Summer Time and all the times in the following listing remain local (ie. GMT plus one hour). BST also means the start of the summer schedules for the airlines although the IT flights all change on May 1st. With this in mind from 27/3 I have listed in full the flights so you can get an idea of the new pattern and call-signs used by each airline. All the call-signs are in brackets and are the actual ones used by the aircraft when calling the tower. Just a few notes on each airline:-

bmi("Kittiwake"):- One EMB.135 is based at LBIA to operated the Brussels flights, while the Scottish flights continue on a twice each weekday basis.

Eastern/Air Southwest("Eastflight/Swallow":- No change from the summer schedule with the Dash 8 aircraft still utilized on the Scotland to Southwest routes and a Jetstream 41 on the Teesside – Southampton service. A SAAB 2000 can be seen operating the evening Aberdeen – Bristol route on Sunday evening.

Easyjet:- The airline ceased their Geneva flight at the end of the month, however they promise to be back for the Winter 2011/2012 season.

Flybe("Jersey"):- The Gatwick service ceased at the end of March, hence no aircraft in now based at LBIA. The company continues to operate flights to Southampton, Belfast City, Aberdeen and Exeter utilizing Dash-8-400 aircraft although Embraer 190s do turn up quite regularly.

Jet2("Channex"):- The airline are to operate to new destinations this summer, but as ever I will just publish any charter and positioning flights in the listings. However, if any of you require tie ups for any of the companies flights please contact the editor.

KLM:- The airline has added an extra daily flight to Amsterdam, making 4 in all. Fokker 70/100 types are the usual equipment, however it is hoped we may see a few more Embraers this year.

Manx2("Kiel Air/Fast Link/Eurovan":- The company continues to use an eclectic mix of Jetstream, LET 410 and Dornier 228 on their Ronaldsway route.

Pakistan International:- Airbus A.310 aircraft operate f/t Islamabad, early evening each Wednesday and Saturday.

Ryanair:- We are back to having just two aircraft based for the summer, however up to 4 non based aircraft can be seen operating flights on some days of the week.

Following its heavy landing last month the Eastern Jetstream 41 G-MAJD emerged from the Multiflight hangar on 14/3 to carry out taxiing trials prior to departing home to Humberside. On the same day The Jet2 Boeing 757 G-LSAL was delivered from Lasham prior to entering service at the end of the month. The other former Thomson example G-LSAM is in service with the airline at Machester by the time you read this, however it has not made an appearance at LBIA yet.

Onto the Southside now and can I start by thanking Mike Mc.Kenzie for his personal tour of the Multiflight facilities in mid-April, he made one little boy very happy. During our ramblings it was noted that the Dauphin which will eventually become G-CGGD is still far from ready to take to the skies. Also in the engineering facility were Long Ranger G-PTOO(under repair following an emergency landing earlier in the month, see under Huggate in the previous section), A.109S G-USTS, Seneca G-JMOS(which blew an engine prior to departure, more details next month), Cessna T.210N G-EEWS(has been in for some time) plus a number of the company's own aircraft. Finally, as predicted last month Pilatus PC-12 M-HARP arrived on 30/3 and is a new resident for Harpin Ltd.

AIRPORT NEWS

The plethora of extra charges faced by air passengers has increased. In addition to drop off car park charges, trolley fees, check-in charges, boarding card printing charges, fast track security charges, liquids bag charges and hold luggage charges, passengers wanting a final cigarette before their flight now have to pay a fee at Belfast International Airport. Smokers at the airport must pay £1 to smoke a cigarette in a designated area, after the fee was introduced this week. They must put a coin into a machine which opens doors to a special smoking area. It is thought to be the first airport in the UK to introduce such a charge. However, it already costs £1 to drop travellers at the airport, there is another £1 fee for a pack of plastic bags to get through security. A spokesman for the airport said it was responding to customer demand and the fee was covering the cost of building the smoking area.

Birmingham is have a new state of the art control tower at a cost of £10 million, the Post reports. Work on the new building will start in May but it will be two years before it is operational because of the complexity of the new equipment being installed. The new 115ft tower will be built on a 33ft high hill. It will dominate the western side of the airport and be easily visible from the A45. Once commissioned it will take over from the original control tower, which is situated at the old Elmdon Airport site and has been in use since 1939. The move from Elmdon to the current airport location took place in 1984 but use of the old 79ft high tower continued. The new building will give air traffic controllers a better view over new buildings that have been built on the airport complex and will allow them to see to the end of the new 400-metre runway extension that it hopes to build.

Doncaster will now be the base of the last flying Vulcan bomber The iconic aircraft will spend the summer months based at Robin Hood Airport, the former RAF Finningley that was the home of the Vulcan in the 1960s. The deal could be the first stage in the development of a visitor centre that will eventually be linked to a facility to inspire the next generation of engineers and technicians. Vulcan to the Sky Trust CEO Dr Robert Pleming said: 'We are thrilled that the last flying Vulcan has come home. We all feel that something very special could be created here, but I must emphasise that these are early days in the discussions.' Work on the multi-million pound Robin Hood Airport link road could start as soon as next summer, after Doncaster was awarded an £18 million share of the Regional Growth Fund announced this week. The news has been welcomed by Robin Hood Airport, which expects a major boost in air traffic from the link. Craig Richmond, airport owner Peel Airports chief executive, said: 'This is tremendous news and will help to bring this vital link between the motorway network and the airport one step nearer, benefiting the future potential for growth in both passenger and freight services at Robin Hood Airport.'

Heathrows controversial Airtrack rail link that was set to link Terminal 5 to south west London and west to Reading has been shelved due to a lack of money and the effect of the project on road users at level crossings, the BBC reports. The £675m line would have connected the airport terminal to Reading, Guildford and London Waterloo stations. A spokesman for BAA told the BBC that its decision to withdraw the rail link application followed concerns raised over level crossings delays. He said: 'We have been unable to develop solutions which fully address these concerns.' Richmond council had opposed the scheme due to increased congestion it said would occur at barriers at Barnes, Mortlake and North Sheen. Heathrow's surface access director Allan Gregory said: 'We've listened to the concerns raised by local residents about the impact of Airtrack and worked hard to try and resolve issues including level crossings. Despite our considerable efforts, including discussions with Network Rail and the local highway authorities, we have been unable to develop solutions which fully address these concerns.' Richmond to try and resolve issues these concerns.' He added the project was also cancelled due to lack of funds

British Airways has suspended flights to Tokyo's Haneda Airport until further notice because of a 'lack of demand' as the nuclear crisis in Japan expected to extend throughout this year The airline only began flying to Haneda in late February. It will continue flying daily to Tokyo's Narita Airport, to which it resumed direct services on April 2. Radiation levels in the sea off the crippled Fukishima Daiichi nuclear plant north of Tokyo were reported to be 6500 times the legal limit on Friday. The Japan National Tourism Organisation in London reported visitors to Tokyo have fallen 75%, but said many of the country's popular destinations were outside the area affected by the earthquake and tsunami on March 11. The UK Foreign Office (FCO) advises against all but essential travel to areas north east of Tokyo, amid continuing disruption and aftershocks. The FCO advises people to stay outside an 80-kilometre radius of the failed nuclear plant – four times the extent of the official evacuation zone. Both Tokyo and Narita lie beyond this limit.

bmibaby is to stop flying from Cardiff and Manchester airports after the end of this summer, blaming the current economic climate. The Lufthansa-owned budget airline currently operates 30 flights per week from Cardiff and 40 from Manchester. It hopes to re-locate the majority of the staff, although some 30-plus jobs in Manchester could be at risk.

A spokesman said bmibaby would pull out of Manchester and Cardiff airports at the end of this summer and focus on expanding at other UK regional airports. It announced new routes from Belfast, with routes Birmingham and East Midlands airports to be announced soon. Two planes will be transferred to Belfast and one each to the other two hubs.Managing director Julian Carr said: 'In the current economic climate it is essential for bmibaby to focus on airports where we have a strong market presence and where there are strong growth opportunities.' Cardiff Airport said it was 'disappointed albeit unsurprised' at the news. There had been rumours that it could quit the airport for some time.

easyJet is adding a sixth aircraft to its Manchester Airport base and will expand the number of destinations it serves to 27. The budget airline will launch flights to Berlin, Belfast and Madrid in the autumn.

Ryanair has axed a route between Robin Hood Airport and the popular sunshine resort of Alicante following a row over cash with Spanish airport bosses. The budget airline, which claims it is being forced to pay @million by Alicante Airport for using air bridges, will axe more than two thirds of its flights in and out of the airport from October 2011. It means Robin Hood's summer timetable to the Costa Blanca city, which runs until October, will continue as planned. However, there will be no winter flights unless the row is resolved.

Officers from Gatwick Airport's Police unit recently met with plane spotters to talk about how they can help keep the airport and local communities safe. Police Community Support Officers Richard Griffith and John Chisholm talked about policing at the airport at the annual Gatwick Aviation Enthusiasts Fair. About 670 people attended the fair at the K2 Leisure Centre in Crawley. The officers briefed the aviation enthusiasts on the way police work closely with Gatwick Airport to help keep the airport and local communities safe from terrorism and other crime. They also highlighted an important voluntary ID card scheme at the airport, through which the plane spotters are also doing their bit to keep Gatwick safe. Sergeant Mat Scanlan said: 'This photo ID scheme is an excellent way of keeping in touch with the genuine aviation enthusiasts who come to the airport. There are over 200 members and they are very co-operative with our patrols and can act as extra pairs of eyes and ears, especially around the airport perimeter.'

Ryanair has launched an enquiry after three passengers on the same flight each won a car worth £11,500 playing its in-flight scratchcard game. The three passengers, who were flying from Milan to Madrid last Monday, won the prize after buying one of the airline's £2 scratchcards, despite an average of only one car being won each month across the airline's whole network. The airline blamed a printing error by Brandforce, the company which runs the game, and promised that all three winners will receive their cars.

A flash mob centred on one of Britain's most under-used railway stations attracted just six people. Even the organiser did not turn up, and neither did the train, the Northern Echo reports ! Oa gloomy Saturday morning just six people appeared on the rather short platform of the halt at Durham Tees Valley Airport. To make matters worse, their expected train - one of just four trains stopping at the station every week - broke down on arrival, leaving them stranded in the wind and rain for more than an hour. The event, promoted via the Internet and social networking sites, was intended to draw attention to the miserly amount of trains using the station, which has recorded less than 100 passengers in each of the last 6 years. Unfortunately it did not add significantly to that figure.

MILITARY NEWS

Typhoon jets are providing a ground attack capability in addition to Tornado GR4 aircraft as British forces continue to support NATO operations in Libya. Speaking to the media in London, Air Vice-Marshal Phil Osborn, Air Officer Commanding No 2 Group, said that the use of Typhoon in a multi-role fit, combined with Tornado, provides a highly responsive and balanced capability while maintaining the deployed force at the most efficient level. The Typhoons are carrying Enhanced Paveway II bombs for the operation, complementing the ordnance carried by the GR4s and increasing the variety of precision-guided weapons available to NATO.

Air Vice-Marshal Osborn revealed that yesterday evening(24/4) a Typhoon patrolling with a Tornado over western Libya was able to positively identify regime main battle tanks (MBTs) to the south of Misurata. The two aircraft attacked and the Typhoon successfully engaged two MBTs with Enhanced Paveway II bombs, while the Tornado hit another MBT with Paveway IV. He also said that the RAF have sufficient Typhoon aircrew to undertake the current task, with appropriate training for all the systems and weapons carried by the aircraft, whether air-to-air or air-to-ground munitions. Speaking about the wider operation. Major General John Lorimer, the Chief of the Defence Staff's Strategic Communications Officer, said that most of the fighting in Libya remains focused firstly around the siege of Misurata by Colonel Gaddafi's forces, and secondly the rather fluid situation in the region of Brega and Ajdabiya. "We should recognise that, within the constraints of air power, the NATO-led operation is delivering very real effect," Major General Lorimer said. "Over the weekend, for example, NATO has reported successful engagements against 61 armoured vehicles and air defence assets. A third of these - 20 - were attacked by RAF fast jets, all in the area of either Misurata, or Brega and Ajdabiya. "As everyone recognises, Colonel Gaddafi still poses a very real threat to civilians, but other means, including infantry in pick-up trucks and technicals, which are of course much more challenging from a targeting perspective. But it is with heavy armour and artillery that the regime is most able to inflict extensive casualties on the civilian population, and day by day these assets are being steadily denied to the regime. "Since the start of operations to enforce UNSCR [United Nations Security Council Resolution] 1973, about 100 tanks, armoured vehicles, artillery and SAMs [surfaceto-air missiles] have been engaged by RAF aircraft alone, including eight main battle tanks attacked vesterday."

Major General Lorimer said more needs to be done and NATO has asked for more ground attack aircraft to be made available, to which the UK has responded by increasing to twelve the number of Tornado GR4s deployed, and equipping four Typhoons to operate in either the ground attack or the air defence role as the commander requires. He said that the use of Typhoon in a multi-role fit, combined with Tornado, provides a highly responsive and balanced capability while maintaining the deployed force at the most efficient level. The General added that the RAF is now providing a guarter of the ground attack assets, and the UK is pressing other nations to match our commitment to what is proving to be the most important aspect of the NATO operation. In addition, other RAF aircraft continue to provide invaluable support across the NATO effort: E-3D Sentries and VC10 and TriStar tankers provide a very significant proportion respectively of the AWACS (Airborne Warning and Control System) and air-to-air refuelling needed by the NATO operation, and the Sentinel and Nimrod R1 provide unique capabilities amongst the non-US forces. "These aircraft are all conducting very prolonged missions on a daily basis: RAF aircraft are flying on average around 15 per cent of the NATO sorties, but have been averaging about 25 per cent of the hours flown." Major General Lorimer said. At sea, he confirmed that HMS Liverpool took over patrolling responsibilities off the Libyan coast from HMS Cumberland last week and that the minehunter HMS Brocklesby has also been contributing to the maritime surveillance task. Meanwhile, the submarine HMS Turbulent remains on hand should targets specifically requiring a Tomahawk strike be identified. Major General Lorimer stressed that the importance of the maritime patrol should not be underestimated: "The fact that thus far the enforcement of the arms embargo under UNSCRs 1970 and 1973 has not been challenged should not belie the necessity for it, particularly as over time the regime's military resources are lost or expended."

Potential buyers of the HMS Ark Royal will get their first chance to look at the Royal Navy's former flagship later. Ministry of Defence tours of the aircraft carrier are starting at the Portsmouth Naval Base. The vessel, decommissioned in March after 25 years service as part of the government's defence budget review, is up for sale on the MoD auction website. Defence chiefs are reportedly backing a plan to use the carrier as a floating commercial helipad in London. Only potential bidders who have registered an interest on the edisposals.com auction website will be allowed aboard for the viewings. Those attending were required to submit an outline of their "intentions regarding the vessel" to the Ministry of Defence in advance. Other proposals for the Ark Royal include turning it into a base for security personnel during the Olympics, or a school or a nightclub. But it could also be sold for scrap like its sister ship HMS Invincible. Ark Royal's operations have included leading the UK's naval forces during the invasion of Iraq. The current ship is the fifth vessel to carry the name - the first saw battle in 1588 against the Spanish Armada. The MoD's defence equipment and support arm has a budget of £14bn to equip the UK's armed forces with everything from aircraft to clothing, and in order to supplement that, it regularly sells off kit that is no longer needed. Also on sale currently are three Type-42 destroyers - HMS Exeter, HMS Southampton and HMS Nottingham. Bidders have until 1000 BST on 13 June to put their tenders forward for Ark Royal.

TAS Manchester Aviation and Transport Fair 2011

You will all recall that the Society had an exhibition stand at the TAS fair in 2010 – our first for many years. It was such a success that the Society will be repeating it this year. The dates are Saturday and Sunday 9 and 10 July in the Concorde Suite at the Runway Visitor Park. There will be over 200 tables selling everything aviation and transport and it is a good day out

Arrangements are well in hand for our stand and a number of people have volunteered to help on one or both days. We learned much from last year's stand and will be making a number of improvements. We have obtained two Plex Display units which will give the stand a more professional look with the ability to show information vertically at either end of the stand as well as on the table top.

We are also intending to have our own branded, eye catching "goodie" bags to hand out. As well as information about Air Yorkshire, these bags will contain leaflets from a number of aviation organisations on the Yorkshire side of the Pennines. These will include: LBIA, Multiflight, the Yorkshire Air Museum, the Square Monkey Café, the Aviation Academy and AeroVenture.

Those of you who may be wondering about a day at the Fair and the RVP will want to know about prices and parking. Entrance to the Fair is £1 with U18s free and additionally you will have to pay to park your car. For this an advance purchase is available at £6 for all day parking and Fair admission for the driver. Pedestrian may enter the RVP free of charge.

Those of you who cannot get to Air Yorkshire meetings may use this opportunity to meet up with other Air Yorkshire members and committee members who will be running the Stand.

Could you have helped to fill this empty space?

Currently I have NO members articles at all, so come on all you budding writers out there I need you help in filling the back pages of the magazine each month. Anything with an Aviation theme please.

ICICLE AND NEWBOULD TROPHIES PHOTOS FROM CLIVE FEATHERSTONE

Icicles can be hot, but not very often. Last year at Sandtoft it was (very), and although that was rare (very) it looked like it might repeat this year. But alas no: temps in mid-teens were forecast but a strong wind-chill kept it traditionally chilly. And it was that wind which caused the inevitable problems associated with aerobatics: upto 35 knots was anticipated, but fortuitously from the west. Whilst this might have been untenable on the old north-south main axis, in the current east-west box it was manageable. It might be said that such weather was also the cause of the reduced entry, for at the last moment three withdrew, leaving a field of only seven at Advanced (of which none were Unlimited pilots) and six at Intermediate. That weather then prevented any flying in the morning, which limited flying to the afternoon, but given the small field it facilitated a valuable two Unknowns per pilot.

Those Unknowns were issued by Chief Judge Nick Buckenham on registration at 0800; a comprehensive briefing by CD Eric Marsh at 0830 sharp incorporated a section headed "risk assessment", which relates to the specification of the designated box. That at Sandhoft is rare in that it is remote from the airfield but has a perfect axis marker and border (M180), with all fields running north-south or east-west. The judging position, although equally remote from the airfield, is in the garden of a private home, which incorporates its own gardener's lavatory: such luxury! Wind dummy Ron Allan patiently provided a few false starts, but Peter Macintosh - who seems to have a forecaster in every town – ascertained from one at Waddington that the low cloud would disperse into blue sky at 1300L.. It did and we flew 26 sorties non-stop until 1720.
